ABOUT THIS DIRECTORY

First Peoples Disability Network Australia (FPDN) has created this directory as an opportunity for Aboriginal tradespersons and Aboriginal relative companies to be a part of the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) as a provider around Home Modifications.

This directory helps our mob with a disability live in appropriate universally accessible housing. It provides information to NDIS participants about Aboriginal trade services across NSW for them to call upon when they need qualified personnel to provide work around their dwelling.

The Trades and Commercial Businesses listed in this directory are fully qualified, licensed and registered Aboriginal owned and/or operated businesses.

FPDN compiled this directory in 2017 from publicly listed information.

ABOUT HOME MODIFICATIONS WITH THE NDIS/NDIA

The National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA) will fund standard home modifications that are found to be reasonable and necessary by the National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA) to facilitate achievement of the goals outlined in a participant's current NDIS plan. (Support not related to the participant's goals cannot be funded through the participant's NDIS plan.)

Reasonable and necessary funding for home modifications generally focuses on the need to access the dwelling and frequently used rooms to support Activities of Daily Living (ADLs). The primary focus would be the participant's bedroom, living area, meal area and bathroom. Fixtures and fittings are considered at a standard grade level. The NDIS assessor should consider that it may be possible to purchase second hand or commercial off the shelf items.

The decision about funding for home modifications is made entirely by the NDIA. The role of the NDIS assessor is to advise and make recommendations to the NDIA and the participant as to the most appropriate option for supports related to the participant's goals. Where required, an appropriate building construction professional or project manager must also confirm the viability of the proposed recommendations to the NDIA.

In the implementation of home modifications participant choice and control comes after the reasonable and necessary supports have been decided and relates to how a participant uses their funds. Where there are costs which are unlikely to be funded by the NDIS or where participants choose to contribute additional funds to upgrade the fixtures or fittings or to extend the modifications, the participant's cost contribution must be agreed prior to the commencement of the build.

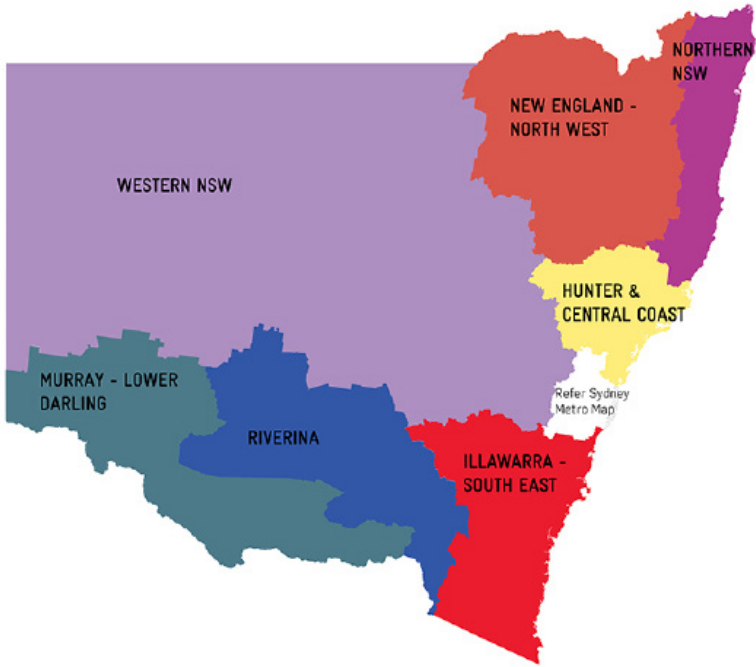

Information on NDIS construction project managers, builders or trades who are registered with the NDIS can be found in the NDIS portal via GPS location which makes it easy for an NDIS participant, family or carer to locate a professional in their area for the required home modification. Construction professionals can still be approached to do the work even if they are not registered with the NDIS.

Contracts with construction project managers, builders and other construction professional trades are between the participant and the supplier (and do not include the NDIA).

The construction project managers or builder must prepare technical detailed specifications, including drawings to scale to facilitate accurate quotation and construction methodology for delivery of the home modification by applicable trades.

During modification works participants should remain in their home where possible. If the dwelling is uninhabitable for a period of time, the time out of the home should be minimised. The schedule of works must prioritise modifications which allow the participant's earliest return. The assessor must advise the NDIA of the need for, and recommend, suitable options for alternative accommodation in the home modification assessment template.
